Discover Rapa Nui

Self guided

There are around 600 stone figures, or moai, on this island—some of which reach 32 feet in height. Many of them stand on the stone ahu (ceremonial pillars) that dot the island's green hillsides. For a bit of history, these were fashioned out of volcanic rock by the first Polynesian settlers after they arrived in 800 CE. The figures themselves represent deceased leaders of the five tribes that once inhabited the island, and supposedly offered spiritual protection. Around the 16th century, the islanders exceeded their natural resources, and—as a result of famine and war—tore down many idols believing they outlasted their usefulness.

By the 19th century, Europeans, smallpox, and slavery arrived, annihilating some of the population, while more emigrated to Tahiti to work on plantations. Eventually, the population rebounded, and Rapa Nui was annexed to Chile in 1888. Locals today are governed under a council of indigenous chiefs.

Suggested activities on the island:

- Explore Hanga Roa. This is the main town on Easter Island with 3,000 residents, or roughly 87 percent of the island's inhabitants. Hanga Roa has a small-town coastal vibe with restaurants serving ceviche, empanadas stuffed with fresh tuna, po'e (a pumpkin and plantain cake), and taro ice cream.
- Take a hike outside of town to Ahu Tahai. Here, there are some moai, as well as caves nearby. It also makes a great sunset-viewing spot for your first night on the island.

Easter Island

Jan 22 - Jan 25, 2028 (3 nights)

One of the world's most isolated places, Easter Island lies some 2300 miles (3700km) off the coast of South America, and its Polynesian residents have completely different cultural traditions from other parts of Chile. Known locally as Rapa Nui, the island is famed for its mysterious monolithic human statues known as moai. You'll also find beautiful beaches and plenty of opportunities for outdoor adventures, including hiking, horseback riding and diving.

You can learn about island history on a visit to Rano Raraku, a quarry containing hundreds of stone statues, some of which lie within the crater of the extinct volcano. In the ceremonial village of Orongo, you can see petroglyphs linked to Make Make, the main divinity for the Rapa Nui people, and enjoy spectacular views over the shoreline. You can't leave the island without a visit to Ahu Tongariki, a collection of 15 impressive statues on the southern coast.

Suggested things to do:

- Hike or horseback ride up Maunga Terevaka, the highest point on the island at 1663ft (507m). You'll have 360-degree views from the top.
- Enjoy some downtime at Ovahe, a picturesque cove with a pink sand beach backed by reddish volcanic cliffs.
- Have a meal at Te Moai Sunset, where you can dine on fresh-off-the-boat seafood while enjoying views over the coastline.
